

PLANNING FOR INCLUSIVE CITIES: THE IMPORTANCE OF LGBTQ SPACES

Eligible for CM credits!

The Montrose neighborhood has long been seen as an inclusive space within the City of Houston. Located close to downtown, the neighborhood is known for its quirky arts and cultural scene, unique night life, and commercial districts historically absorbed within a diverse transect of residents. Residents and visitors of Montrose are as unique as the neighborhood itself including artists, the LGBTQ+ community, service workers, and older longtime residents. Many were first attracted to Montrose for its counterculture spirit. As this community's popularity continues to grow, land values continue to follow, endangering the historic and culturally significant residential makeup of Montrose. Across the United States, national experts are working to better understand how to balance economic growth and development with preservation of a neighborhood's inclusive identity. As a part of the Montrose Livable Centers Study, the Montrose TIRZ #27, Houston-Galveston Area Council, and Asakura Robinson invite you to join us for a panel discussion featuring national experts as we look to them for the best practices in planning for inclusive cities and LGBTQ+ spaces.

Thursday, October 29
6:00PM - 7:30PM

Webinar Registration: inclusivecities.eventbrite.com

Co-moderators

Petra Doan
Professor
Florida State University

Katie Coyne
Principal, Urban Ecology Studio Lead
Asakura Robinson

Panelists

Curtis Winkle
Associate Professor
The University of Illinois at Chicago

Eric D. Shaw
Director
San Francisco Mayor's Office of Housing and Community Development

Shayne Watson
Architectural Historian
Watson Heritage Consulting

Andrew H. Whittemore
Associate Professor
University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Megan E. Springate
Post-Doctoral Associate
University of Maryland